

FAMOUS "SALOON SMASHER" IS DEAD

Paresis Causes Death of Mrs. Carrie Nation, the Noted Crusader.

Leavenworth, Kan., June 10.—Mrs. Carrie Nation, famous as a crusader against saloons and known as the "saloon smasher," died here shortly after 7 o'clock last night.

Mrs. Nation had been in poor health for months, and on January 27 she entered the local sanitarium in which she died, hoping to recover from a nervous breakdown. Death was due to paresis.

It became evident several days ago that Mrs. Nation could not recover and Dr. A. L. Sumalsky, a physician at the sanitarium, informed her that the end was near. She said nothing, but smiled. She became unconscious at noon and did not revive. Relatives had been telegraphed for, but only Dr. Sumalsky and a nurse were at the bedside when she died.

Worry over lawsuits, which she had filed against a lecture bureau for alleged failure to pay for services on the platform, is said to have caused her to break down.

The last five months of Mrs. Nation's life in the sanitarium was in marked contrast to her former activity. Once she saw a physician at the sanitarium smoking a cigarette. She made no remonstrance, merely saying she had done all she could do to "eradicate the evil."

The body will be sent to Kansas City, Kan. Funeral services will be held there probably Sunday.

Was Born in Kentucky.

Carrie Moore Nation was born near Versailles, Ky., nearly 65 years ago. In 1878 she was married to a Dr. Lloyd and lived for one year at Holden, Mo. Her husband died of delirium tremens. After 10 years of widowhood, she married David Nation, and for a time lived in Warrensburg, Mo., where she was the editor of a paper. They later moved to Richmond, Texas, where Nation conducted such a strenuous reform campaign that they kept the Lone Star state in a constant turmoil. In the national campaign of 1884 the Nations incurred the enmity of a certain class, and one night 20 men gave Nation a severe beating. They then moved to Medicine Lodge, Kan.

Mrs. Nation had long fostered the anti-liquor sentiment and in 1901 she became her sensational crusader of physical violence against saloons. Following minor episodes in Kiowa and Wichita, Kan., she went to Topeka, and in March, 1901, threw a hatchet across the polished mahogany bar of the Spruce saloon near the state capitol, breaking the mirror into a thousand pieces, mutilated costly paintings and smashed the glassware. The crusade was then on in earnest. Kansas had a statewide prohibition law, but in those days it was flagrantly violated. Mrs. Nation visited many cities in Kansas, preaching the doctrine of "down with rum," both in words and deeds.

In August, 1901, her husband obtained a divorce and is now said to be living a retired life in Beria, Ohio.

Then followed many memorable trips by the crusader in many states of the union, lecturing on the evils of drink, and in many cases following her speeches up with practical demonstration in "joint smashing." She was arrested several times for destroying Accumulates Fortune.

By the sale of "souvenirs," by lectures and other profitable exhibitions of herself, Mrs. Nation is said to have accumulated a fortune of nearly $150,000.

Many melodramatic and farcical incidents occurred during her tours, but the one that first broke the warlike spirit of the turbulent crusader occurred in one of the lowest dives in Chicago about midnight. She had been making the rounds of the saloons exhorting the occupants to lead better lives when a young man serving drinks to the human wrecks said to her: "Hello, grandma Nation." She did not recognize him, but as she was generally addressed as "grandma," she thought nothing of it. She asked the boy if he didn't have a mother, and if he wasn't ashamed of the life he was leading. The boy looked at her in amazement and said: "Why, don't you remember me? I'm Riley White, your little grandson!" The woman collapsed, sank to the sawdust covered floor, sobbing hysterically and paying no attention to the painted faced girls who bent over her. Her spirit was broken and since then she has never been the aggressive, disturbing Carrie Nation of old.

On February 12, 1911, she suffered a nervous collapse in Eureka Springs, Ark., and never recovered from its effects. After living with her sister at Eureka Springs for a while, she was moved to the Evergreen hospital, Leavenworth, Kan., where she was in a very feeble condition for some time.

Misnamed.

Representative Davis of West Virginia wandered into the National Press club one evening on one of his visits to Washington and called loudly for court plaster.

"What's the matter?" asked a bystander.

"I've cut my finger very badly," replied Davis, holding up a middle finger bandaged with a hard dkerchief.

"How did you do it?"

"On a safety razor," he explained.

DISSATISFIED WITH CLOUDCROFT.

It hardly seems possible that any one could be dissatisfied with Cloudcroft. Yet this unheard of condition actually exists. An El Paso matron who recently went to Cloudcroft noticed that her daughter, a little miss of 12, seemed unhappy and did not enter into the spirit of Cloudcroft. Upon inquiry as to the reason, the little girl told her that she would much rather be in El Paso where she could go to Scott White & Co.'s in the Mills Building every day and get a delicious cool drink.
